I'm currently at work and have a few minutes to kill, so I decided I should be cutting my long hair into a more manageable length. I have lived with this hair for a little over ten years now, and while I have always much preferred my hair long, over time I've grown to actually quite enjoy the natural feel of it. So, my reasoning was short hair would make me look like a Freshman at college again. But, alas, I was disappointed with my new cut. [IMG] [IMG] [IMG] And so, at approximately 6:52pm, I decided to go to bed rather than complete my t-shirt collection for that night. I didn't feel well and was experiencing a headache that had risen to my temples, as well as not feeling like myself. So, I fell asleep, and woke up in the early morning feeling very tired and groggy. I got out of bed and made my way to the bathroom to brush my teeth and have some water. I woke up a few hours later and was still feeling drained, but now my headache had subsided enough to just feel tired. With that, I finished my water, turned off the light, and laid back down. But, I had a really bad headache, as if someone had squeezed the inside of my skull with their thumb. I laid down for a few more minutes, trying to distract myself with some TV until I finally fell asleep. [IMG] [IMG] [IMG] I remember waking 82138339de
