A new Pew Research Center poll has some disappointing news for proponents of a higher minimum wage. Most Americans (76 percent) said they would support raising the federal minimum wage to at least $10 an hour — but only 20 percent of Republicans and 12 percent of Republicans said they supported it, on average. With its new survey, the research center found that support for a minimum wage hike was largely bipartisan. While 59 percent of Republicans said they would support a minimum wage hike to $10 an hour or more, 32 percent said they would oppose it. Senate Democratic Leader Harry Reid has introduced a bill to raise the minimum wage to $10.10 an hour. Last week, President Obama endorsed raising the minimum wage to $10.10 an hour, but stopped short of endorsing Reid's plan. "At a time when nearly 1 in 10 families in this country can't earn enough to afford a basic necessity, we can't afford not to act," Obama said on Wednesday. Story continues below advertisement. But businesses — including many small, family-owned ones — say increases in the minimum wage would be bad for consumers and the economy. Small businesses are the engine of the U.S. economy, employing nearly 60 percent of the private workforce. Small businesses owners tend to be older and white, and they are disproportionately women. A study by the National Small Business Association found that small businesses with 500 employees employ only 10 percent of all workers but account for 43 percent of all firms. Small businesses also tend to be more likely than large businesses to be family run. And small businesses are more likely to hire workers at minimum wage. Only 20 percent of small business owners say they pay their workers at least $10 an hour. The Pew survey found that although Republicans support a “more modest” minimum wage hike, the vast majority of them — 89 percent — said they believe small businesses should
